In ancient Egypt, when a cat died in the house, the inhabitants shaved their cycbrows; if a dog died, they snaved their whole body. In Athens, one of the laws of Triptolemus declared that no one had a right to in-flicts wrong upon a living creature. The Greeks were aware of the tender and affectionate care which the young of the stork exhibited for their old parents, and recorded that, when the latter feet their feathers from age, the young stripped themselves of their down for them and fed them with the focal they collected. This was the origin of the Greek law called "the law of the stock," by virtue of which thildren were obliged to take care of their and practice and these who CHITOUS HISTORY Of a Will.

Children were obliged to take care of their seed parents, and those who renead to do so were declared infamous. How different is it in our modern excitates Pierquin remarks with reason that, as man rises, he treate shimels as if they were correspondingly degraded. For a long time they had the same rights. During the middle ages they were allowed a part in religious ceremonies. At Milan they figured in the festivals of the kings; and processions of animals appear in thebas reliefs of the cathedrals of Straeburg, Mans, and Vienne (Isere). On Holy Wednesday all the clergy of the church of Rheims went to Saint Remi to make a station there; the canons, preceded by the cross, were arranged in two films, each drawing a herring after him with a cord; and each one was intent upon saving his own fish, and stepping upon that of the canon in front of him (Anquetil, "Histoire de Reims"). At Paris, the procession of the fox was as much epipyed as the festival of the ass. civilization.

While the rights of animals were thus recognized, their duties toward man did not escape the earlier legislators, who severely punished their crimes and attempts upon human life. The law of Moses (Exodus xxi, 28, 29) recites: "If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit. But if the cx were wont to push with big owner of the Ox shall be quit. But if the cx were wont to push with bits born in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death."

Judgments based on this principle are recorded at Athens and Rome.
